

Annapurna North Base Camp Trek

Trip Overview

Annapurna North Base Camp Trek is a hidden base camp trek. Also called the Maurice Herzog Trail. It is a historical trail, Where the first 8000er Summitter Maurice Herzog used this trail. It is not a popular trek in Nepal but the Annapurna North Base camp trekking trail is yet to be well-explored despite its brilliant history, On 3 June 1950, French mountaineers Maurice Herzog and his colleague Louis Lachenal reached the top of Annapurna I height of 8091m, being the first climbers in modern history to climb a peak over 8,000 meters after this expedition. It is also a normal climbing route for Annapurna I. The people who climbed Annapurna I for the first time settled base Camp on this Annapurna North Base Camp, and they climbed the North Face of Annapurna.

There are many major attractions on this trek. The view from ANBC is Annapurna I, Tiliche, Nigiri and Baraha Shikhar could be witnessed during the trekking 360-degree mountain view at base camp. Which makes hikers speechless. Also, Tranquil Narchyang Lake at base camp is frozen at night and in the morning when the temperature comes down during the winter season, Hot springs, glaciers, waterfalls, and caves also make this route majestic. Dense Rhododendron flowers also are an added attraction. Suspension bridges, stone steps, and mountain terrain also are parts of this route. Magar culture at Lower and Upper Narchyang is an enjoyable fragment of this route. Wild lives like Himalayan monal, Musk Himalayan thars, Himalayan gorals, musk deer, snow leopards, blue sheep, bears, and wild dogs are the prime attractions of the route.
