

Island Peak Climbing

Trip Overview

Imja-Tse also known as Island Peak, at 6165 m, is one of the most famous trekking peaks in Nepal. At an elevation of 6165 metres, Island Peak climbing is located in Sagarmatha National Park in the Himalayas of eastern Nepal, in the Khumbu region. (ImjaTse), or Island Peak, is also the most frequently climbed peak in Nepal. In 1956, ImjaTse summit was first climbed by a Swiss team as preparation for climbing Mount Everest and Lhotse. It was also a training peak used by Edmund Hillary and Sherpa Tenzing in 1953, and the route they discovered is the same one that is used today. Many mountaineers consider climbing Island Peak the beginning of climbing in the mountains to prepare for a big mountain expedition in Nepal.

The peak is actually an extension of the ridge coming down off the south end of Lhotse Shar, situated less than 10 kilometres away from Everest. Once this peak was viewed from Dingboche, it appeared as an island in a sea of ice, and the peak was named Island Peak in 1951 by Eric Shipton. Although in 1983 the peak was renamed ImjaTse, it has continued to be popularly recognised as Island Peak. The climb, besides being pleasant, also provides some of the most spectacular scenery in the Himalayas in the Khumbu region. From the top of Island Peak, you can see a breathtaking panorama of gigantic mountains – Nuptse (7,864m), Lhotse (8,516m), Lhotse Middle (8,410 m), and Lhotse Shar (8,382 m), which form a semicircle in the north, and the stunning views of Makalu (8485m), Baruntse (7152m) in the east, and the famous expedition peak of Amadablam (6814m) in the south. As the climbers' descend from the peak, the route takes them into many cultural sites, such as Pangboche – a traditional Sherpa village; Tengboche – famous for its richly adorned Tibetan monasteries; and Khumjung, with Hillary School inside the clouds and the mysterious Yeti scalp. It is absolutely an unforgettable experience to climb Island Peak in the Himalayas. It would be best to climb Island Peak from March to May and from September to November.

ImjaTse Peak climbing, at 6165 m, is one of the best peaks in Nepal. It is a 5800m to 6500m peak in the Nepal Himalaya, located in Solukhumbu district in Nepal.
