

Saldim West Peak Climbing

Trip Overview

Saldim West peak is situated at 6375m elevation from sea level. Saldim West peak climbing is a newly opened unclimbed peak in Nepal. It has only recently opened in 2014. On the way to Makalu Base Camp, Saldim West is located on the north side at Sankhuwasabha District, in the south-east direction of Mt. Makalu at a Longitude of 87° 09' 33" and Latitude of 27° 49' 27" at the Tibet border. Saldim West peak is one of the Himalayas among the 104 Himalayas which was further added by the Nepal government. This is absolutely a new peak therefore any climbers can have their name recorded as the first climber by taking an initiation to climb and making it to the peak. The attraction of this place is enhanced due to its charming, religious and cultural surroundings. There are also eminent religious sites and there is Barun Valley- world's lowest valley adding to its exquisiteness. Another important attraction here is Makalu Barun Rastiya Nikunja/ Makalu Barun National Park. The park consists of different kinds of flora and fauna, birds including some rare species of animals like Red Panda and Spiny Babbler (in Nepali: Kaande Bhyaakur) which can be found only in Barun National Park. Red Panda however are found in other places as well. Since Saldin Peak is totally a new peak, the visible views from here are all limited in imagination. The fascinating Himalayan ranges around Saldin Peak: Tutse Himal range in the South, and in the north (continuously to the north from Tutse), we can have the view of Himalayas like Chamlung, Baruntse, Everest, Lhotse and Makalu all of which are ranked as some top mountains in the world. The distance from Saldin Base Camp to Makalu Base Camp is very little; it takes only three hours to reach Makalu Base Camp. Beautiful pools like Barun Lake and other small lakes, mesmerising waterfalls, and prepossessing landscapes have made Barun Valley (Makalu Base Camp) a complete paradise. The Shiva Dhara (Shiva Cave), here even adds more charm to the surroundings. There is no doubt that Saldim West Peak climbing for the climbers will be one of the most memorable and a gratifying experience for a lifetime.
